PROJECT IDEA

Young people today moved various their activities to the Internet, while the majority of NGOs still put more effort to gain youngsters offline. Usually, NGOs treat the Internet simply as a platform for one-directional communication.

Through this mobility, we want to encourage youth workers to use the Internet in a broaden perspective. This activity is the first step to reach the online gap we can observe between NGOs and young people.

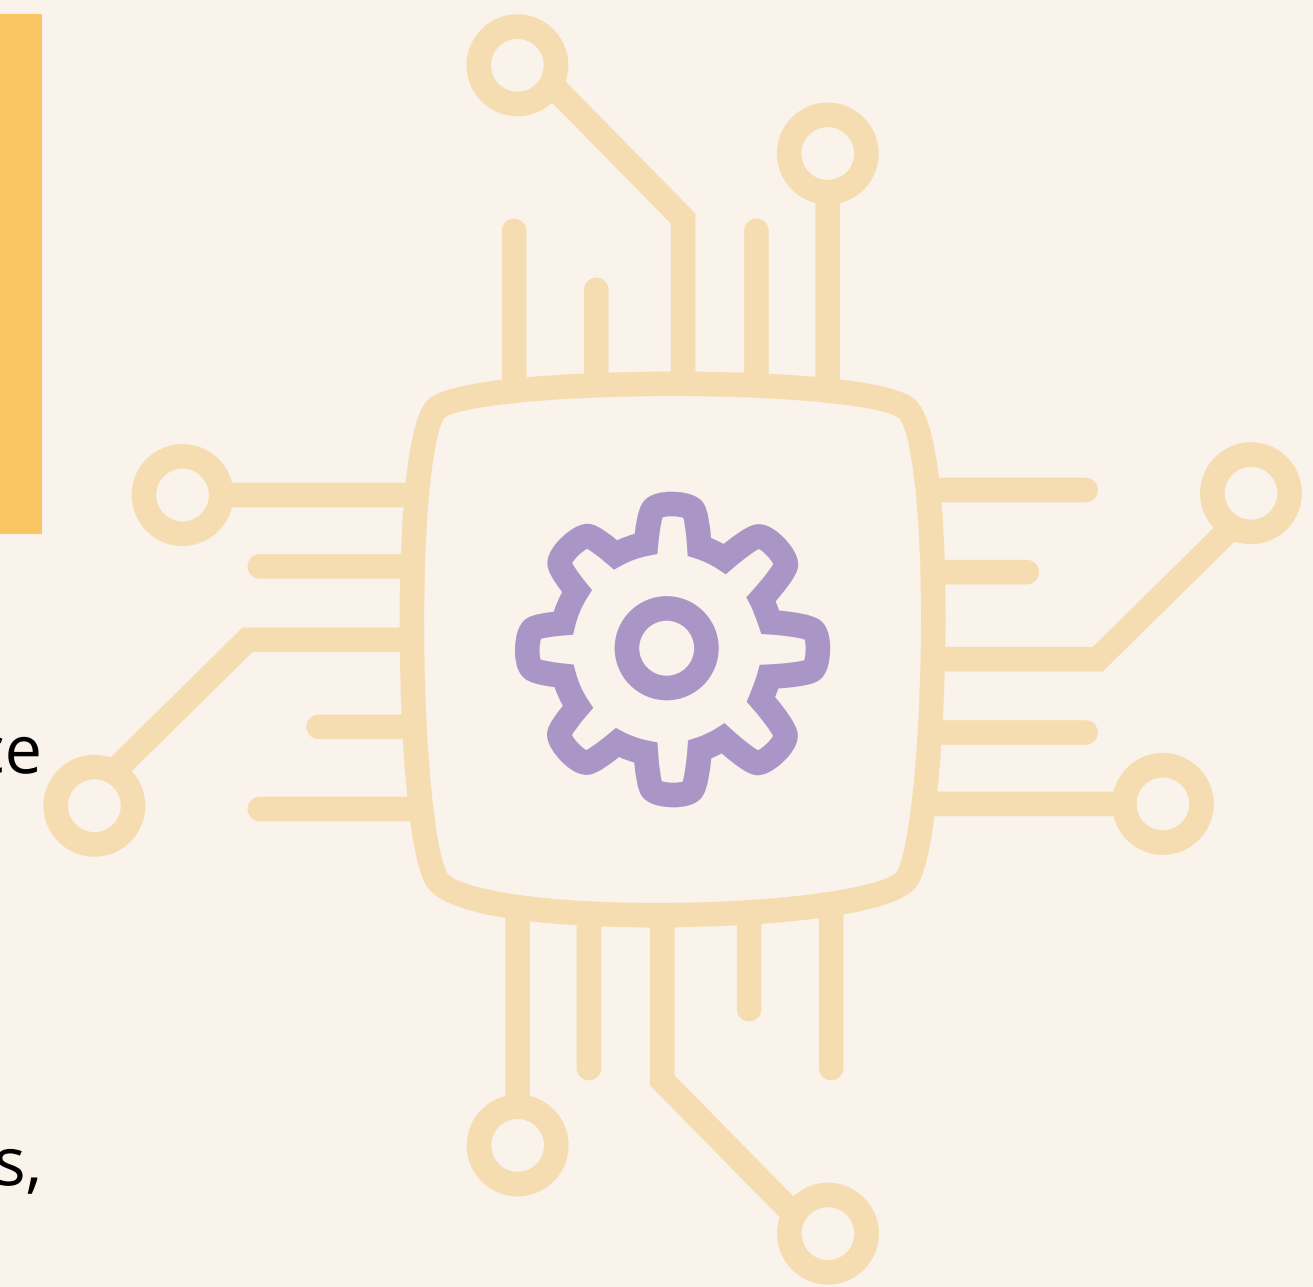

The main aim is to prepare participants on how to educate and work with their target group(s) with the help of new tools, new online approaches and methods. After this mobility, participants should know how to efficiently share knowledge, skills, ideas and how to build engagement with youth through the Internet.

OBJECTIVES

Workshops during the mobility aim to give participants knowledge, skills and experience about:

- creating the youth-oriented outline for a webinar,
- online education (definition, pros and cons, motivation, possibilities and limitations, applying to daily work),
- defining personal and professional goals,
- digital tools that can be involved in their online youth work,
- safe for young users Internet : cybersecurity, risks, challenges, cyber threats,
- using and performing in front of the camera,
- working in international teams, discussing, presenting opinions, giving and receiving feedback,
 - online journaling creation, building engagement with youth through the Internet, building motivation in online education, creating modern, eye-catching graphics for internet use, creating helpful mind-maps and vision boards,
- closing the learning process in the online environment
